

INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE REMINGTON 700 PRO-SERIES® STOCKS

H-S Precision's Pro-Series® composite stocks represent a new era in the production of high tech synthetic rifle stocks. Pro-Series® stocks are designed to last a lifetime with little maintenance and with no initial fitting required.

DIRECTIONS FOR INSTALLATION

1. Before beginning the installation of your new Pro-Series® stock, check to make sure your gun is not loaded. After you have done this, remove the bolt assembly.
2. Remove the guard screws that hold the barreled action in the original stock. It is not necessary to reuse these screws.
3. Using the provided socket head screws, install the barreled action into the Pro-Series® stock. The action screws provided with your stock are generally longer than the original screws and may need to be trimmed to the correct length. Torque the screws to 65 in/lbs.
Note: Remington 700 actions will bolt into the Pro-Series® stocks with no alterations necessary. Custom barrel rifles may require some barrel inletting.
4. After the installation of the barreled action is complete, check to see that the safety moves freely, and then reinstall the bolt. Check to see if the bolt handle rubs on the stock. Check the bolt release mechanism to make sure that it works freely, as well. If these three features function correctly, your rifle is ready for the range.

NOTE:

Epoxy bedding is not required. The bedding block is designed so that all stocks are interchangeable, action to action. This was proven in testing for the Army's M-24 Sniper Weapon System.
